

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. I do not dread answering calls in the evening now as I do not fear hearing the words, "This will only take a minute of your time" or "We're not selling anything", etc. The number of unwanted calls to my home has dropped drastically, and considering I spend much of my work day on the phone, this is of great importance to me. The Telephone Privacy law should remain as is, not be pre-empted by a law with less protection.
